

I nner gardens – Albin Millot

In the science of dreams, the garden is an idealized representation of the inner world.
It's a secret garden.

Here, blurry and colourful fields...

Recreate the outer beauty of a place, through its interior.

Capture images of spaces called "green". Burying them in their own ground.

A necessary chemical and organic maturation step. It transcribes from within the oneiric image of the place, detached from any human action.

Our representation of the garden becomes obedient, docile to the wild transformations.

The lair of the earth is becoming nature translator for humans.

And its image becomes our own Humus.
